

Maglev Alternative Screening Public Meetings
March 2002

Corridor alternatives for the Baltimore-Washington Maglev Project are undergoing a screening process to determine which alternatives to continue for further study. Following the public meetings and agency coordination, the MTA will formally select two alignments for detailed study and eliminate one from further consideration. Comments and suggestions on the project and potential concerns are invited from all interested agencies and the public to ensure that all significant issues and all reasonable alternatives are addressed. Please fill out the information on the bottom if you'd like to be added to our mailing list. For additional information, please visit our web site at www.bwmaglev.com.
